Police, feds search for suspect in carjacking that left 11-year-old dead

Chicago Tribune

A community gathered at a Southwest Side elementary school Monday to grieve the death of an 11-year-old student with thick glasses and a fondness for Flamin' Hot Cheetos as police pressed on with their search for the man they believe caused the crash that took the boy's life.

More than 100 people attended the afternoon vigil to honor Donovan Turnage at Morrill Math and Science Specialty School, which reopened during winter break so family, teachers and classmates could share their goodbyes.

Donovan Turnage

authorities said.

The Illinois State Police said they were working with Chicago police and federal law enforcement officials late Monday in the search for Douglas, whose last known address was in far north suburban Beach Park. As police sources offered new details Monday about the dangerous driving that led to the

Donovan, his brother and their father were out getting haircuts on Saturday when carjacking suspect Rockie Douglas, 34, allegedly barreled into their Chevrolet Suburban while being chased by police, boy's death, court files indicated Douglas has a long string of arrests, from the Chicago area to southern Wisconsin.

Donovan's brother, Derrick Turnage, who was in the Suburban when the crash happened, recalled the moment of impact.

"We just spun," said Derrick, 20. "And my father was hollering ... 'Where is Donovan?' And I looked back, and I reached for his coat, but he was nowhere in the back."

Then they saw Donovan sprawled on the curb, Derrick said. "I held his head, and I looked him in his eye. I already [could] tell he drifted away right there," he said.

Donovan Turnage's brother, speaking after the vigil, said he understands that police were doing their job when the crash occurred.

"They're doing as much as they can," Derrick said. "I'm not going to blame anybody but the guy that hit us. I'm not going to blame the police. I hope they find him. I think they're doing their job."

At the vigil, attendees hugged one another and held lit candles. The Norah Jones song "Long Way Home" played on the loudspeaker.

A parent volunteer at Donovan's school, Angie Gray, drew laughter from the crowd when she remembered how he had a snappy temper as a little boy, and how she was able to help him change that.

She shared with the audience an hourlong conversation with him about his temper.

She recalled Donovan telling her: "I don't have an attitude today. I won't be mad today, Ms. Gray. I'm going to be real good ... because you said so."

CTA compiles hefty to-do list

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

tswartz@tribune.com
@tracyswartz

If 2013 was the year of the Red—thanks to the summer reconstruction of the southern portion of the Red Line—then 2014 will be the year of the Blue. The CTA is expected to begin work in the spring on a $492 million, four-year project to ease the slow zones and upgrade stations on the O'Hare branch of the Blue Line.

The agency and the city next year also will continue to work on current ventures, including improving the 95th Street and Clark/Division Red Line stations, building the new Cermak-McCormick Place Green Line stop and reducing slow zones on the Brown Line.

Here, Going Public rounds up the other big-name CTA projects for 2014.

» Loop express bus implementation: The Chicago Department of Transportation is expected to begin work next year on Loop bus rapid transit, express bus service that typically relies on bus-only lanes and traffic signal priority for buses. The city has said the $32 million project could improve overall bus travel times through the Loop by three to nine minutes per trip.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Kostner Pink Line

Missed connections? More like no connections. The Kostner stop in North Lawndale is one of 13 of the CTA's 140-plus rail stations that doesn't have a CTA or Pace bus stop at the station. Perhaps that's why it sees the fewest entries—fewer than 500 on weekdays—of any Pink Line station. Next up: Morse Red Line

WHERE IS TURTLE?

A sign in a Wicker Park building adjacent to the Damen Blue Line station house encourages riders if they see Turtle the cat in the window of the building to "take my photo and tag #CTACAT." The sign says Turtle's Twitter handle is @TheCTACat but there is no profile associated with that handle.

» Wilson Red Line renovation: The $203 million project will involve renovating the 1923 station house, making the station accessible for riders with disabilities and creating a transfer point for the Purple Line Express. The Uptown station has been crowned by Going Public in the past as the CTA's "Crust Station" for its grime, pigeon excrement and lack of accessibility.

» Ventra transition: The CTA already was supposed to have completed its full transition to Ventra, the agency's new fare payment system, this month but the CTA slowed the switch so Ventra vendor Cubic Transportation Systems could work out glitches. Full transition, which includes the elimination of Chicago Cards and disposable magnetic cards, is inevitable in 2014, though no switch date has been announced. The CTA said Friday that Cubic is meeting many of Ventra's performance standards, a requirement for full transition, and Ventra is used to pay for nearly three out of four CTA rides.

WORKING IN CHICAGO

THEME!

How much of your life would you say you spend working or at work? A lot of it, right? Right.

Everyday stories and images from this place, where the majority of our time is spent, inspire us—and we want to hear about it. So we've started a new Instagram-based photo project, and it's all about you.

What: 312Works, an Instagram storytelling project about the lives of Chicago workers

Where: Instagram! Find us at @redeyechicago. Also, check the mini-site, where we post and feature submissions: 312works.tumblr.com.

How to get involved: Every two weeks, we will provide a new hashtag prompt for you, focused on one aspect of "working." Use it to tell a story on Instagram, using both a photo and a caption. Other than that? No rules—get creative!

We'll announce the new theme every other Tuesday, as well as feature the best of the crop from the last. Questions? Tweet us at @redeyechicago or visit the 312Works Tumblr. Can't wait to see what you come up with!

2 held in fatal officer shooting

Chicago Tribune

Police said they didn't have to go far to find the two men who wound up being charged with gunning down a Cook County sheriff's investigator outside a holiday party at a west suburban VFW hall. Officers followed shoe prints in the snow to a home just 400 feet away, prosecutors said in court Monday.

Estrada

Inside were Brandon Jackson and Gage Thornton, both 22, according to authorities. Prosecutors said the men fled to Jackson's Bellwood home after an attempted robbery of the shooting victim's daughter and her boyfriend went awry.

Found in the home were items of clothing, including a black ski mask, seen in surveillance video of the shooting Friday, authorities said. Also recovered was a box filled with ammunition for the .44-caliber handgun prosecutors say was used to kill Sheriff's Officer Cuauhtemoc Estrada, 50, according to court documents.

Jackson and Thornton, charged with first-degree murder and attempted armed robbery, were ordered held without bail Monday by Circuit Judge Ramon Ocasio. Both men have criminal records. Jackson's includes three residential burglary convictions, the most recent in 2009. Thornton was convicted of theft in 2010 in Wisconsin.

Prosecutors said Thornton gave a videotaped confession, telling investigators that he and Jackson went to the parking lot of a VFW hall at 2817 St. Charles Road in Bellwood about 7:30 p.m. Friday to rob someone.

Jackson wore a ski mask and was carrying a gun as the men put their plan into action, prosecutors said.

At the VFW hall that night, Estrada was hosting a Christmas party for family and friends. His daughter and her boyfriend were taking a tray of food out of their car when Thornton and Jackson approached, prosecutors said.

"Give it up, give it up," Jackson yelled, holding the gun at his side, prosecutors said.

Jackson tried to go through Rigoberto Anaya's pockets, but Anaya resisted. "I ain't [bleep] with you. Get naked, get naked," Jackson yelled, according to court documents.

At that point, Officer Estrada and his son walked out of the VFW and Estrada said, "What's going on?"

"This guy's trying to rob me," Anaya yelled, according to court documents.

Officer Estrada pulled out his gun "to protect his daughter and her boyfriend," and Jackson shot him once in the chest, prosecutors said.

Jackson and Thornton then ran back to Jackson's home, where Jackson called a friend and told him what he'd done, according to prosecutors. A few hours later, police knocked on the door of the home and were let in, prosecutors said. The black ski mask was hanging out of Jackson's back pocket, prosecutors said.

CHICAGO VIOLENCE

ONE CITY
UNDER THE GUN

South Shore recorded two homicides Thursday, one of the deadliest days of the year, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

At about 4:45 a.m. Thursday, a 74-year-old man was fatally shot in the 7000 block of South East End Avenue in South Shore. A half hour later, a 41-year-old man was shot to death in the 6700 block of South East End Avenue, police said.

South Shore has logged 30 homicides so far this year, up from 20 killings last year, RedEye found.

Also Thursday, gunshots killed a 27-year-old man in the 5300 block of South Talman Avenue in Gage Park; a 19-year-old man in the 7700 block of South Stewart Avenue in Greater Grand Crossing; and a 33-year-old man in the 5600 block of West Chicago Avenue in Austin, according to officials.

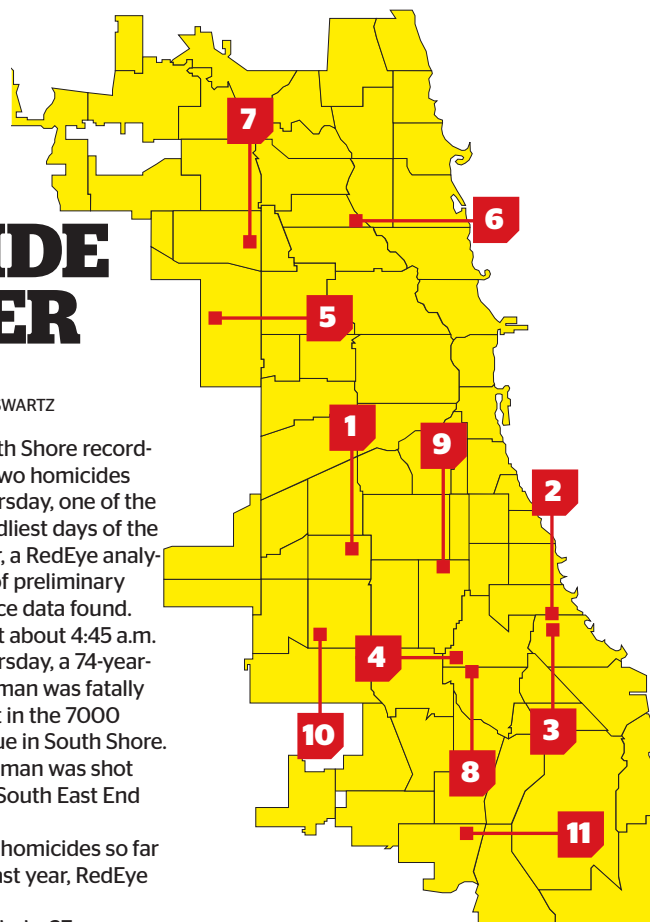

Five homicides also were recorded on Jan. 1, July 21, Sept. 2 and Sept. 21, according to RedEye data. Six homicides were each logged on June 16 and Oct. 9.

The deadliest day of the year so far in Chicago was Jan. 16, which saw seven homicides, RedEye determined.

Citywide, fatal shootings have been logged since Wednesday in Avondale, Belmont Cragin, Chatham, Chicago Lawn and West Pullman, according to police information.

Meanwhile, an 11-year-old boy was killed in an auto crash Saturday in the 5500 block of South Halsted Street in Englewood, police said. The Cook County Medical Examiner's Office ruled the case a homicide.

Thirty homicides have been recorded so far this month. Twenty-seven homicides were logged in December 2012, RedEye found.

Utah gay marriage allowed to proceed

1 Same-sex marriages were allowed to proceed in Utah after a federal judge on Monday refused to block his own ruling making gay marriage legal in the state. U.S. District Judge Robert Shelby said the state had not met the legal standards required for him to issue a stay against his ruling.

Father, son dead in apparent murder-suicide

2 A father and his 3-year-old son died after the man threw the boy from the roof of a luxury Manhattan high-rise and then leapt off the building on Sunday following "domestic turmoil" with the boy's mother, New York police said Monday.

At least 7 dead in severe weather

3 A band of severe weather from tornadoes to icy blasts left at least seven people dead as winter storms and severe weather pushed up the East Coast on Sunday, bringing record high temperatures to New York City but ice storms to parts of New England.

Israel releases Palestinian prisoner

4 The Israel Prison Service on Monday freed Samir Issawi, a Palestinian inmate whose prolonged hunger strike helped fuel weeks of protests in the West Bank this year. Issawi, 34, refused food for eight months, receiving only infusions of water, vitamins and other supplements, according to his attorney.

Egypt reformist group under investigation

5 Half a dozen leading members of the reformist group Judges for Egypt have been summoned before a judge looking into allegations the jurists formed an illegal organization, the state-owned Ahram website reported Monday.

Obamacare deadline extended

6 The Obama administration said Monday it has extended a deadline for health insurance under Obamacare, giving consumers shopping on healthcare.gov an extra day, until Dec. 24, to pick plans that kick in for coverage beginning Jan. 1.

"The deadline for signing up for coverage to start January 1 is today," said Julie Bataille, a spokeswoman for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, the agency responsible for the website.

"Anticipating high demand and the fact that consumers may be enrolling from multiple time zones, we have taken steps to make sure that those who select a plan through tomorrow will get coverage for January 1," she said in a statement.

President Obama completed a "symbolic" signup for a health insurance plan under the Affordable Care Act over the weekend in advance of Monday's deadline, the White House said.

Obama chose a "bronze" plan in the Washington, D.C., exchange. But like previous U.S. presidents, he will continue to receive health care from the military.

There are exceptions to the Tuesday deadline for some, though.

There is a "hardship" exception for some that permits them not to sign up any kind of health insurance at all without facing a penalty—the hardship being problems they've encountered with Obamacare and its malfunctioning website healthcare.gov.

There also will be a "good faith exception" for others, according to a senior Obama administration official.

"We'll have a special enrollment period," the official said last week, for "all those who make a good faith effort to get enrolled by the deadline" but fail to do so.

Still others may simply get a break from insurance companies, which the administration has urged to be flexible with people who miss the deadline.

Such is the uncertain state of Obamacare as it approaches what was originally supposed to be a defining moment—a signup deadline that would provide the first real test of the viability of the healthcare program brought into law by the Affordable Care Act.

2 members of Pussy Riot freed

8 MOSCOW Two members of the feminist punk-rock band Pussy Riot were freed from prison Monday as part of an amnesty law that one of them immediately denounced as "a profanity."

The two musicians were released after serving most of their two-year sentences for hooliganism, a charge that stemmed from the "punk prayer" they performed denouncing President Vladimir Putin in Moscow's main Russian Orthodox cathedral in February 2012.

Both women emerged with their defiance intact, vowing to work to promote human rights in Russia. Many observers viewed their release under the amnesty law as a damage-control measure by the Russian government before the start of the 2014 Winter Olympic Games in Sochi.

Their discharge followed that of Mikhail Khodorkovsky, the oil tycoon who was regarded as Russia's most prominent political prisoner. He was freed Friday after being granted clemency by Putin.

'Magic Mike' is RedEye's 2013 Stud of the Year

The man they call "Magic Mike" has put some spell on Chicago.

After fans cast a total of more than 3,600 votes on the RedEye Sports Facebook page last week, Fire forward Mike Magee emerged as the 2013 Chicago Sports Stud of the Year.

The arrow's been pointing up for the Chicago-area native all season. Since being traded to the Fire early in the year, Magee scored 15 goals and notched four assists. He had a total of 21 goals in 2013 and was named MLS' most valuable player last month.

He also might be invited to the U.S. national team camp in January, meaning 2014 could be even bigger for the 29-year-old.

Magee raked in 57 percent of the vote, followed by Sky forward Elena Delle Donne at 38 percent.

On the other side of the coin, it pains us to give our 2013 Dud of the Year "honor" to a native Chicagoan. One who's a former NBA Rookie of the Year and MVP, no less.

But after waiting a year and a half for Derrick Rose's return, fans understandably are bitter now that he's injured again and the Bulls are in a tailspin. He hauled in half the vote in our poll. Chalk it up to horrible luck, not necessarily lousy performance. And see ya in fall 2014. REDEYE

1	How do the Bears get that loss to the Eagles out of their heads?	Have a few friends over—Jack, Jim, Tito and Stella.	Listen to "It's a Small World."	Based on their performance, the Eagles were never in their head to start.	Forty glasses of eggnog should do the trick.	Hold a Throwback Thursday scrimmage with McCown starting at QB.
2	Should Aaron Rodgers return from injury against the Bears?	Bring it on, Discount Double Check boy!	I wouldn't "discount" it. Lol commercials!	Sure. In exchange, can Cutler return to injury?	If he does, he should return as a running back ... that'll make sure he stays pristine.	As a Bears fan, no!
3	Forget the final score. Make one other prediction for the Bears-Packers game.	Jay Cutler: INTs and pouting. Josh McCown: TDs and play-offs. #TeamJosh	Somehow the Lions will end up losing?	One of the teams, unfortunately, will be in the playoffs. Playoffs!?!?	Shea McClellin bites on a fake. ... I'm good at this.	McCown leads the Bears to victory while Cutler rides a stationary bike.
4	You're Jonathan Toews' secret Santa. What do you get him?	A bigger wallet for when that new contract gets signed. Pay the captain!	iTunes gift card.	New blades. The team can't skate by on last year's Stanley Cup.	A girl from the Ice Crew? But that's a lot of wrapping paper.	A blinged-out grill to hide the missing teeth.
5	How can you tell it's college football bowl season?	My work schedule tells me so. I'll be on the sidelines reporting.	The sudden urge to buy Tostitos.	Northwestern players are busy applying to grad school.	ESPN is always showing the Company I've Never Heard of.com Bowl.	There was something called The O'Network Gayle Bowl on the other day.

STILL RIVALS

By Jack M Silverstein | FOR REDEYE

Once a rival, always a rival. With the Bears taking on Green Bay on Sunday in the season finale, RedEye spoke with retired Bears Jerry Azumah, Rashied Davis and Hunter Hillenmeyer to get their take on the Packers now that they're done playing.

JACK M SILVERSTEIN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

What's your favorite memory of playing in the rivalry?

Jerry Azumah: I just remember going up to Lambeau for the very first time. That was probably one of my favorite stadiums just to play at. My fondest experience was getting to run out of that tunnel for the very first time and knowing about that story, that history, that rivalry. To be able to go out there and play in front of everyone and go against the Packers for the very first time was pretty incredible.

Rashied Davis: I have lots of fond memories of playing in the rivalry. One would be my first catch [in the 2006 season opener in Green Bay]. I was being covered by Charles Woodson. And I remember watching Charles when I was at San Jose State and he was with the Raiders. And then when I was in Arena, I met him once or twice. But having my first catch be against him was huge for me.

What's it like to defend Brett Favre?

Hunter Hillenmeyer: The M.O. on Favre for all of those years was he's great, and he doesn't really get rattled, so he's not going to panic and screw up. But he's so confident in his abilities that he'll throw you the ball two or three times a game, so our goal was always to limit the big plays, and to catch it when he threw it to us.

How do you feel about the Packers now that you're retired?

JA: It's still the same thing: I just don't like them. [Laughs.]

RD: I still hate the Packers. [Laughs.] It was drilled into us.

HH: I don't know. There's a lot of people there that I still identify with. I think Aaron Rodgers is probably a pretty good dude. He seems like a likable dude and he's an amazing quarterback. So there's not a lot of people there to hate.

Leonardo DiCaprio and company let loose in the wild west of Wall Street

Reuters

NEW YORK This one had Leonardo DiCaprio's name all over it.

When he read the no-holds-barred, unapologetic memoir that "The Wolf of Wall Street" is based on, he knew he had to portray the cocaine-snorting, fast-talking financial bad boy of the story, and he had Martin Scorsese in mind to direct.

"I felt his biography was a reflection of everything that is wrong in today's society. This hedonistic lifestyle, this time period in Wall Street's history where [the main character] basically gave in to every carnal indulgence possible and was obsessed with greed and obsessed with himself, essentially," he said.

Oscar-winning director Scorsese plumbs the depths of the debauched, hedonistic lifestyle of a 1990s convicted stock swindler and the world of high finance in the flick, a cautionary tale about excess, lust and greed.

Opening Christmas Day, it's based on the memoir of disgraced stockbroker Jordan Belfort, who made a fortune by defrauding clients and spent it on expensive cars, homes, a yacht, hookers, orgies and all the alcohol and drugs he could consume.

Scorsese, the 71-year-old Academy Award-winning director of 2006's "The Departed," strays from the cinematic turf of mobsters to focus on a different type of crook in the film that magazine Screen International described as "Goodfellas' without the guns."

"I'm interested in people—some people who are basically good but do bad things," Scorsese said.

"The Wolf of Wall Street" reunites Scorsese with triple Oscar nominee Leonardo DiCaprio, who worked with him on "The Departed," "The Aviator" and "Shutter Island."

The three-hour, R-rated film earned a Golden Globe nomination for best musical or comedy movie and a best actor nod for DiCaprio, generating speculation of more to come when the Oscar nominations are announced Jan. 16.

Terence Winter also picked up the National Board of Review award for best adapted screenplay for transforming Belfort's book to the screen.

"I couldn't believe that what I was reading was a true story about someone who is actually alive at the end of it," Winter said.

The film charts the rise of the middle-class, dental-school dropout from his introduction to the free-wheeling world of Wall Street and the rise of his company during the bull market of the '90s with all of its excesses, to his arrest and imprisonment for securities fraud and money laundering.

With rousing speeches, Belfort fired up his employees to cold call investors to sell stocks in a scheme that would line their own pockets, not their clients'.

"These weren't the fat cats destroying our economy. These were the street urchins. These were the guys from the underworld that were trying to create a little island and emulate Gordon Gekko," said DiCaprio, of the fictional character played by Michael Douglas in the 1987 film "Wall Street."

Jonah Hill, an Oscar nominee for "Moneyball," plays Donnie Azoff, Belfort's uncouth, loyal partner in depravity and crime who helps organize a dwarf-throwing competition in the office.

Rob Reiner, normally behind the camera, takes on an acting role as Belfort's father. Kyle Chandler, last seen in "Zero Dark Thirty" and "Argo," is the incorruptible FBI agent who brings Belfort down, and Australian actress Margot Robbie ("About Time") is Belfort's second wife, Naomi.

Matthew McConaughey, a Golden Globe nominee for this year's "Dallas Buyers Club," appears as an early mentor, fond of cocaine and multiple-martini lunches, and French actor Jean Dujardin, 2012's best actor Oscar win-

SCENE AND HEARD

At the "Wolf of Wall Street" premiere last week, the stars on the red carpet were hotter than the investment tips. Considering the movie tells the story of a convicted stock swindler, that was a good thing. BLOOMBERG

A truer American hustle, Martin Scorsese's "The Wolf of Wall Street" bests David O. Russell's "American Hustle" in an important department: "Wolf" zeroes in on greed and need and says in vivid, convincing fashion,

"Baby, the hungrier you are, the easier it is for me to feed you crap."

No, that's not a quote from the movie.

Like "Hustle," the three-hour "Wolf" features a great deal of voiceover and a main character who sees no fault in conning people. "Their money was better off in my pocket," notes Jordan Belfort (Leonardo DiCaprio, funny but loud), the real-life stockbroker whose book inspired the film, defending the practice of selling junk stocks to his clients. He's following the path of his mentor (Matthew McConaughey, splendid in a brief role) who advocated coke, twice-daily masturbation and an attitude that turns Jordan into Jay Gatsby's reckless half-brother.

Jordan's frequent boasting about horses and yachts could be mini versions of James Franco's amazing "Look at my [bleep]" speech in "Spring Breakers." His unquenchable greed and affinity for snorting drugs off hookers' posteriors turn him into something of a hedonistic cliché.

The Wolf of Wall Street R

Perhaps a dudes-and-ludes movie like "Wolf," which at times feels like "Goodfellas" gone comedy, has to be somewhat cold. Jordan is an amoral playboy with no regard for the people he swindles or the wife (Cristin Milioti, Ted Mosby's wife on "How I Met Your Mother") he ditches for Naomi (Margot Robbie of "About Time"), a beauty worth naming a yacht for. Yet if the emotional detachment of "The Wolf of Wall Street" is partly deliberate, it's also a flaw in the script by Terence Winter, whose other movie about wanting to get rich or die trying was actually called "Get Rich or Die Tryin'."

Just because Jordan neglects to see beyond his own nose doesn't mean the loooooong "Wolf" has no time to pay attention to the deluded investors he leaves behind. It also doesn't validate the notion that no friends on Wall Street have a greater sense of looming betrayal than the one hanging over Jordan and his top guys (led by a distracting Jonah Hill). Instead, Jordan's self-indulgent priorities and the film's indifference to his victims mean "Wolf," which is fittingly smarmy but tries too hard to be funny, has low stakes—even when tens of millions of dollars dangle in the air. Jordan's not a complex, tragic figure; he somewhat recalls Tucker Max. The film doesn't exactly advance the social and financial discussions of Oliver Stone's "Wall Street" or its many copycats that detach success from emotions.

Despite its conventional arc and limited interests, it's impossible to deny the vicarious pleasures of "The Wolf of Wall Street," a success if it creates even a temporary desire to sympathize with the bad guys and live in style. That money doesn't actually seem to buy Jordan happiness should be a surprise to no one, and of no concern to those drooling over his spoils.

"The Wolf of Wall Street"

ner for "The Artist," is a suave Swiss banker.

Most reviewers have praised the frenetic pacing and bravura sequences of bacchanalian revelry, even as a handful griped that the story lacked the dramatic resonance of Scorsese's earlier masterpieces such as "Goodfellas" and "Raging Bull."

Some reviewers have yet to weigh in, but the movie currently enjoys an 82 percent "fresh" rating on Rotten Tomatoes.

The film won't win points for subtlety, which is just fine with Rex Reed. It's loud, garish and excessive, which is exactly the point, the New York Observer critic argued.

"Did I say over the top?" Reed wrote. "I meant over the moon."

The New York Post's Lou Lumenick panned the film as bloated and indulgent.

"Naked Hookers! Cocaine! Quaaludes! Hookers and cocaine! Quaaludes and hookers! Dwarf tossing! Naked Leonardo DiCaprio with a candle in his butt! Leo snorting coke from a hooker's butt! Rinse, repeat," Lumenick wrote, summing up the movie.

It's either a rollicking party or a hangover waiting to happen. Everything depends on your perspective.

The Top 10 NYE concerts—and what to drink at each show

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

New Year's Eve once again presents Chicago music fans with a difficult decision. Here are 10 concerts taking place Dec. 31 and the cocktail you should toast with at each show when the ball drops.

Death

Reggie's Rock Club, $20-$25

Sound (in five words or less): 1970s punk revived

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

"Keep on Knocking," a song about perseverance from a band that refused to quit

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: Rye whiskey is making a comeback, much like these Detroit punks.

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: That the musicians record a new album and fellow Detroit native Jack White produces

Flosstradamus

Riviera Theatre, $60

Sound (in five words or less): Dizzying hip-hop/dance mashup

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year: The rowdy "Crowd

Ctrl," which sounds designed to inspire the opposite effect

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: A blended whiskey for the mix-up masters

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: We'd like to see the duo cut it up with Kid Sister (the actual sister of Flosstradamus' Josh Young) some more in 2014.

Alejandro Escovedo

Dessa

Lincoln Hall, $30-$35

Sound (in five words or less): Hip-hop with heart

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

The atypically aggressive "Warsaw"

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: A Long Island iced tea, like Dessa's music, goes down easy and packs considerable punch.

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: That the Minneapolis-based MC finally gets the same respect as her more heralded male counterparts

Pickwick

Schubas, $30-$35

Sound (in five words or less): Garage rock 'n' soul

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

"Hacienda Motel," an explosive tune that should sound even better live

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight:

Beer, preferably something cheap and canned

Black Joe Lewis

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: We'd like the Seattle sextet to hit the road for a coast-to-coast tour with the likeminded Alabama Shakes.

Alejandro Escovedo & the Sensitive Boys

Space, $65-$95

Sound (in five words or less): Rock with a sensitive side

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

"Man of the World" doubles as a New Year's resolution; Escovedo declares he can take a punch right before swinging back with one of his own.

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: Shiner Bock for the native Texan

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: Continued health for Escovedo, whose music long took a backseat to a litany of illnesses

Jimmy Eat World and Smoking Popes

House of Blues, $100

Sound (in five words or less): A double dose of power-pop

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year: If the two groups teamed up to cover anything by the Cars, it'd be nirvana for pop-rock fans.

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: Soda "pop," for obvious reasons

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: That the criminally underrated Popes get a taste of Jimmy Eat World's past radio success

Girl Group Chicago

Hideout, $20

Sound (in five words or less): 1960s girl groups, amplified

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year: A cover of Martha and the Vandellas'

"Heat Wave" would be a nice tonic for the frigid December temperatures.

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: A timeless cocktail like a martini pairs nicely with the sprawling crew's classic sound.

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: That the all-female crew inspires women of all ages to pick up instruments and start bands of their own

Black Joe Lewis

Metro, $61-$500

Sound (in five words or less): Fiery blues-rock

Hear's to 2014!

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

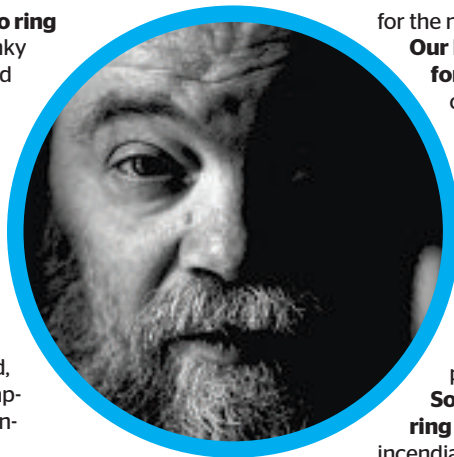

The funky "Come to My Party" could ignite the dance floor.

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight:

A high-octane spirit like 151 to match Lewis' flammable blues-rock sound

Our New Year's resolution for the artist:

We'd like to see a live album from the band, which has never quite captured the power of its concerts on record.

Karl Denson's Tiny Universe

Park West, $45-$50

Sound (in five words or less): Acid-jazz with a funk twist

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year: "Galaxy" can be as epic and awe-inspiring as its stargazing title.

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight: Something complex and surprising. Any chance Park West could steal Aviary's crew for the night?

Our New Year's resolution for the artist:

That Denson continues to let his freak flag fly, since his music is at its best when he's working those outer reaches

Roky Erickson

Beat Kitchen, $30

Sound (in five words or less): Tortured Texas psych-rock

Song we want to hear to ring in the new year:

The incendiary "You're Gonna Miss Me," which is destined to outlive us all

Drink you're probably toasting with at midnight:

Absinthe's psychoactive properties pair nicely with Erickson's howling psych-rock.

Our New Year's resolution for the artist: We'd love to hear a follow-up to Erickson's 2010 comeback album "True Love Cast Out All Evil."

PLAYING THE 2013 CELEBRITY STOCK MARKET

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

We can't possibly be the only ones who resolve to have a better year come Jan. 1. Famous people also have 365 days to improve their careers, their love lives or their choices in ice cream. But who actually accomplished their goals, and who, well, should cash in their chips? There's only one way to find out—the celebrity stock market.

Jennifer Lawrence

At first we almost went for even money on this one, because J. Law was freakin' awesome in 2012 as well. Then we remembered: She won an Oscar for "Silver Linings Playbook," made Katniss Everdeen even fiercer AND sashayed through "American Hustle," while still dropping more hilarious lines than the past 10 years of Adam Sandler movies combined.

UP

Justin Bieber

What a hot mess the Bieb was in 2013. From alleged escapades with prostitutes/porn stars in Brazil to pissing off his neighbors with his terrible driving to having the "worst birthday" in London, the fact that rumors of his impending retirement were flying by the end of 2013 should be a surprise to no one.

Miley Cyrus

Yes, she did get de-engaged, and yes, the entire world saw her in nude-colored latex underpants. But THE ENTIRE WORLD saw her. Exposure is exactly what Miley (or her handlers) was looking for, and that's exactly what she got, for better or worse. Before 2013, did your grandma know who Miley Cyrus was? Probably not.

Chiwetel Ejiofor

He's been around for years, but Chiwetel finally got his breakout role in "12 Years A Slave," for which he's getting HUGE Oscar buzz. And about that being-around-for-years thing: 2013 was the 10-year anniversary of "Love Actually," which drew much discussion of the film's merits. Chiwetel played Keira Knightley's husband. Seriously, go do a double-take.

Miguel

This was a mostly up year for Miguel. He did a duet with Mariah Carey, toured with Drake, won a Grammy for his song "Adorn" ... and jump-smash-kicked two audience members on live television during the Billboard Awards. You'd think the other stuff would be enough to overshadow that, but this is an important lesson in never underestimating the power of an Internet meme.

Lady Gaga

Was 2013 the year we finally got over the Gaga? Her latest album, "Artpop," did debut at No. 1 on the Billboard chart—but it only sold 258,000 copies, in comparison to the 1.1 million moved by "Born This Way." She underwent hip surgery, forcing her to cancel and reschedule tour dates. And she toned down the weird—for the most part. We guess even a diva needs a rest sometimes.

Furious 6"

FOREVER ON FILM

Yes, "Fast and Furious 7" will come out in theaters—and yes, it will feature Paul Walker.

The latest installment of the franchise that made Walker a star was about halfway finished when he died in a car accident Nov. 30. Until recently, it was unknown if production would continue; according to ew.com, Universal will use the footage they have of Walker in the final cut of the movie. "Fast and Furious 7" will premiere April 10, 2015.

It's a cub!

Kate Winslet and her husband Ned Rocknroll have named their newborn son Bear, according to people.com. That's Bear Winslet, by the way—the cub is apparently taking his mother's last name. On the one hand, kudos for bucking tradition. On the other hand, YOU COULD HAVE NAMED YOUR SON BEAR ROCKNROLL AND YOU DIDN'T. Bear Rocknroll, people. Bear. Rocknroll.
